1. Meetings were held recently with [redacted]

25X1

[redacted]
Pratt and Whitney, in order to pursue the investigation of unrest generated by [redacted] regarding producibility of FWA-523 fuel.

2. Unanimous comment indicates that crude availability, process availability, and specification requirements will not limit quantity production of subject fuel. At the same time, assurance must be provided for a continuing quantity market in order to provide the incentive required for modification and allocation of refinery capacity.

3. Solicitation of proposals from industry will require specialized technical briefings rather than normal governmental procurement channels.

4. Monitored handling and storage experience will be required for implementation of subject fuel usage.

5. Possible approaches for gaining handling and operational experience will be covered by a separate memorandum.
